Barely double digits. But sure, it's legal. You've got some points and a queue of justifications, no doubt.

State-approved, socially censored, and still younger than your niece. Pretend it's just the food you're into.

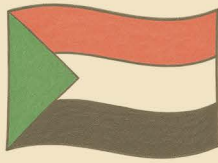

Rural, poor, and still somehow more generous than you. You'll probably claim it was "tribal custom" just to dodge the guilt.

Literally "any age." Technically, you can only have sex once you're married. Yet Yemen lets you marry whenever. So yeah. You do the maths. 3 extra points if you admit that you aren't just the problem.

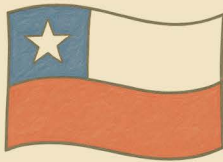

Legal? Sure. Local? Even worse. Easy flag points and no passport stamp to hide behind.

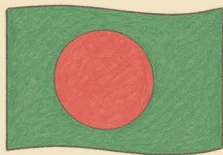

Age of "maturity", what does that mean? Puberty? Periods? Parental permission? You didn't ask. -5 points for weaponized ambiguity.

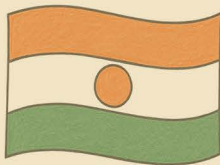

Like Yemen, with the youngest 'legally documented' age of marriage being 5. Take your theology with a side of therapy.

Constitutional democracy. Progressive policies. Still, 14. Tell yourself it's a wine tour.

Floods, factories, and now your fallback fantasy. 2 points. You're not here for the scenery.

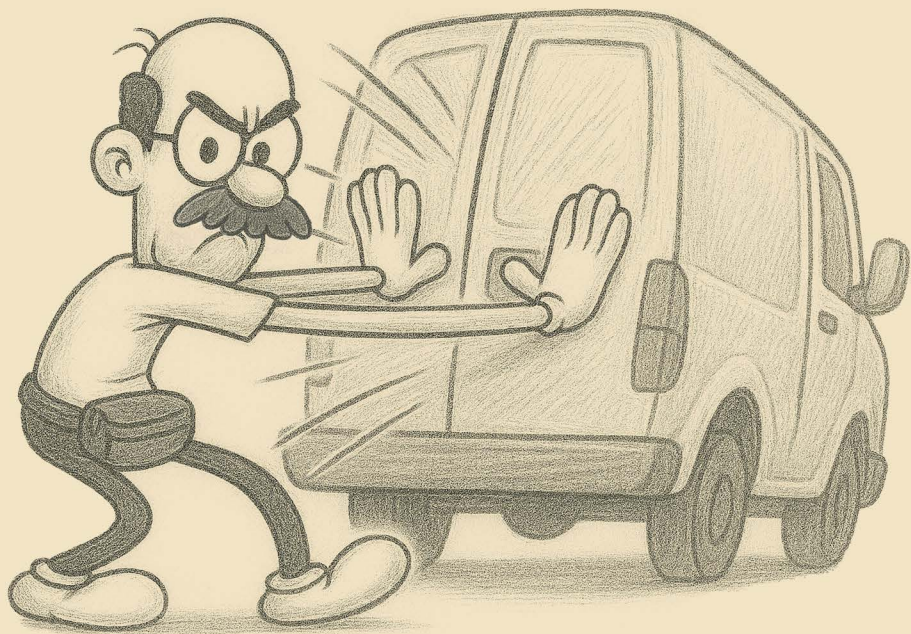

Landlocked, lawless, and barely literate, so just your type. Say it was "a misunderstanding" and see who believes you.

Congratulations. You've turned ethics into an Air Miles program. Consent isn't cultural, it's just convenient when you need it to be. But hey, you did your research.
